

Listen to this BEFORE you Recruit or Interview Employees: Simple Legal Guidelines and Practical Tips!

Finally, an easy to understand CD telling you exactly what you can say (and should never say) when interviewing a prospective employee.

You will be amazed to learn what words should never come out of your mouth under any circumstances when you are interviewing. This is a must have CD for any employer. It even gives you tips on how to write your ads — the words that you should use in ads (and the words that you should never use in ads).

On the CD, attorney Nancy Joerg, employment lawyer from Wessels Sherman is working with her real-life client, an Illinois carpet retailer, who wants to hire a warehouse person and a secretary. He wants to learn how to properly advertise for, recruit, and interview prospective employees.

Nancy and her client go through all of the “do’s and don’ts” of advertising, recruiting, and interviewing job applicants. She explains what is legal to ask a job applicant. Nancy and her client have an in-depth discussion about why certain things are not appropriate or legal to bring up in a job interview. Her client is shocked and dismayed by the many things he absolutely cannot say in a job interview.

This is a dynamic and down-to-earth practical CD. Any person in the workplace who is responsible for interviewing job applicants must listen to this CD. It is really one of the most affordable methods possible for training those individuals in a company who are charged with the responsibility of interviewing job applicants or writing ads for job applicants. It is excellent for your human resource person, attorneys, business advisors, office managers and anyone who deals with the hiring process.

The CD is easy to understand, with no “legalese.” It is fast paced and packed with information crucial for job interviewers who wish to avoid accidentally introducing illegal discrimination into the recruiting and job interview process. Also, there is a good deal of humor interspersed throughout the tape. Real life examples are evaluated.
